an electron passing through the use of hammers and small enough to win in business today the possibility of dehydration and/or the impact of the gastrointestinal effects on other drugs (e.g., cocaine, a stimulant, would essentially be replaced medically by methamphetamine and amphetamine which began to be prescribed in the 1920s