what this means is that mere recklessness or negligence are not sufficient for the state to uphold a conviction since general treatment programs are usually designed for male adults with relatively serious problems, the program requires considerable modification to meet the needs of youth